Boston Steamship in Collision

30 IN PERIL AS VESSELS CRASH

The City of Savannah, Boston Bound, Strikes Collier in a Fog on Nantucket Shoals

The lives of thirty passengers and the crews of both vessels were menaced in a crash between the Boston-bound passenger steamship City of Savannah and the steam collier Walter D. Noyes in a fog at Cross Rip Shoal, off Nantucket. The vessels collided where Vineyard and Nantucket Sounds meet at the shoal. Both were proceeding cautiously because of the heavy fog. Considerable damage was caused to the collier, which left Boston Saturday in charge of Captain Anderson. The City of Savannah was bound from Savannah, Ga., under Captain Garfield, she carried ninety passengers, jump to the vessel liner. It was reported, was slight. As a result of the sea crash, both vessels anchored for the night and the fog had lifted somewhat. The collier is putting back to repairs.

SEEK TO INDICT ALLEGED THIEVES

The Brighton police are to seek indictments against Arthur J. Ryder, No. 8 Grant avenue, Alston and Gardner La Trone of No. 183 Harrison avenue, South End, charging them with breaking into the apartment of Edward Souther, No. 71 Chester street, Alston, where property valued at $500, was stolen. In Brookline court they were examined and were held in $5000 for the grand jury.

Don't Fear You Will Be Served!

NO interruption of milk deliveries in Greater Boston need be feared as a result of any disagreement between the local distributors and Milk Wagon Drivers' Union, Local 380.

This is to inform our customers that arrangements have been made by the milk distributors to deliver your milk regularly each day with as little delay as possible. May we ask that you be patient with us during the adjustment period?

Milk is food, and food is life. As distributors of this essential food, we have assumed our responsibility to the mothers and children of Boston and suburbs. At all costs, therefore, we shall strive to maintain an adequate and regular supply so that none shall suffer the want of milk.

And so we say:

Don't Fear. You Will Be Served!

Burglar Tunes in on Radio as He Robs Chicago House

Chicago, March 31 (U.N.)—Gun clicks, wounds and frowning prison bars—what are these when a radio fan stands before a receiving set and feels that compelling urge to tune in and find what's on the air? Chicago's radio burglar risked all for a good broadcasting program. Charles Kordecki returned home with his wife and two children to find his radio set tuned in and flooding their apartment with music. He was met by the burglar, who had his own gun as well as Kordecki's. They struggled and Kordecki got one of the guns. Both opened fire, but the intruder escaped. Between shots, the loud speaker poured out melody.

EX-SCHOOL HEAD ARRESTED AS SWINDLER

Former Principal of New Haven School Captured in California

New Haven, March 31.—Daniel Lafayette Flint, former principal of the Orange Street Grammar School, alleged embezzler and bank swindler here and in California, is under arrest in Willis, Cal. Flint disappeared from New Haven in February, 1923. It is alleged he took with him $3500 milk fund raised by school children; $450 of a junior Red Cross fund by school children; trust fund for $2000 for the grand jury.

BARR NOW SOUGHT AS FUGITIVE

Freud From Prison After 23 Years, He Flees From Theft Charge

Charlestown prison is waiting again for James Barr. The little, bent old man, released from the prison less than a year ago, after serving twenty-three years of a possible life sentence, is a fugitive from justice. A few minutes before he was to be arraigned in Roxbury District Court today on the charge of stealing the handbag of a woman injured in a street car accident, Barr became panic stricken.

On a conviction meant that he would be returned to State's Prison, there to serve the remainder of his committed term of thirty years to life. Suddenly, his terror got the better of him and he dashed from the building.

A short time later a default warrant was issued and the police are searching for him.

It was in April, 1923, that Barr was released from Charlestown prison. Twenty-three years before, he was given a life sentence for a crime committed in his home town, Fitchburg. The victim of his attack was a middle-aged spinner. Barr was said to be the only Scotman in prison in Massachusetts. Thirty-fourteen members of the State banded together to obtain his freedom. His sentence finally was commuted, despite opposition of his divorced wife and family. He was paroled with the understanding that he would never go

WOMAN SAVED FROM JAIL AND CHILDREN

DELLELO FAMILY OF HYDE PARK
Mrs. Virginia Dellelo of 61 Stoughton street, Hyde Park, put up her house as bail bond for a friend of a man who worked for her husband, a contractor. He was charged with carrying weapons and eloped his bail. Then the house was found not to be worth the $2,000 required, so Mrs. Dellelo was given three months to pay $1,000. By scrambling and scraping she has just managed to do it. She appears in the upper part of the picture. Below are James, aged 3, and Esther, 8. Lower row, left to right, Frank, one and one-half years; Eleanor, 10; Joseph, 5, and Julia, 16.

A friend of a friend who played false—and Mrs. Virginia Dellelo, Hyde Park mother of six children, scolded his bail. Then the house was found not to be worth the $2,000 required, so Mrs. Dellelo was given three months to make restitution of $1,000 and keep out of jail. Now the money is all paid and

300 POLICE AS MILK GUARDS

Big Detail to Watch Plants and Ride on the Delivery Wagons if Strikes

Three hundred Boston policemen will guard the plants and ride on wagons of Allen Bros., D. Whiting & Sons Company and Francis S. Cummings, in the event that employees of these milk concerns go on strike tomorrow morning.

The strike is set for tomorrow. Requests for police protection by attorney for the three companies, resulted today in an order by Police Superintendent Oyster, assigning 300 "extra duty" policemen to strike duty.

The strike detail will go on duty at 6 o'clock tonight at plants of the concerns. Tomorrow, if the strike is called, the policemen will accompany the loyal and substitute drivers over the milk route.

Allen Brothers have plants at Nos. 24-28 Denmore street, Roxbury, and No. 15 Walton street, Dorchester.

The Cummings concern has plants at No. 443 Bondar street, East Boston, and in Greenmont street, Dorchester.

D. Whiting & Sons Co. has plants at No. 520 Rutherford avenue, Charlestown, and No. 31 East Milton street, Hyde Park.

Through arrangement with the Medford and Cambridge police, other details will go to the Tufts College station of the Cummings Company in Medford, and the Walter Company station at No. 155 Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, and ride into Boston with drivers.

Superintendent Crowley, in his order today, warned the special police details to observe "strict neutrality" during the impending strike.

CARS CRUSH MAN TO DEATH IN MEDFORD

This father of five children was instantly killed and one of his boys was crippled for life, if not fatally injured, when they were crushed between two street cars in front of the Boston Elevated car barn on Salem street, Medford, before the horrified gaze of churchgoers.

The dead man is Patrick Hanley of No. 409 Salem street, Medford. His son, John Hanley, thirteen years old, with whom he was bound for mass at the Immaculate Conception Church nearby, was removed to the Malden Hospital, where his right leg was amputated at the knee. Motorman James M. Ellis, operator of the one-man car that landed in the crash, was arrested.

Malden Pastor, Near 100, Is Now Believed Oldest in World

The Rev. Edward Stuart Best, of No. 52 Lawrence street, Malden, is the oldest minister in the world, according to available records. Next September he will celebrate his 100th birthday anniversary. The honor of being the world's oldest living minister goes to him through the death at Flint, Mich., of the Rev. Seth Reed, D. D., who, like Rev. Dr. Best, was a Methodist.

Although Mr. Best preaches only occasionally, he never misses a Sunday service at the Centre Methodist Church of Malden.

RECLUSE WILL GO TO HOME OF OLD FRIEND

Founding Ex-Vassar Girl, Starving in Assinippi Woods, Accepts Woman's Offer

Mrs. Catherine Hull, "Lady Hermit of the Assinippi woods," however, will go back to a normal life when she is released from the Plymouth County Hospital.

A home has been offered to the woman who, for twenty years, lived the life of a lonely recluse in a wood-chopper's hut off the main road from Boston to Plymouth, where a member of the State Constabulary found her freezing and starving.

The offer of a home was made by Mrs. Bertha Bishop of Everett and was accepted by Mrs. Hull, who says that she is the wife of Professor W. F. Hull, once a teacher in one of the foremost educational institutions of New York.

The authorities believe she is a Vassar student of forty-five years ago.

The offer by Mrs. Bishop and Mrs. Hull's acceptance, means that in reality she is "going home."

Twenty-five years ago, the mysterious woman of the Assinippi woods, lived with Mrs. Bishop—then Bertha

DEMANDS REMOVAL OF 'T. R.'

Senator Dill Calls on Coolidge to Oust Roosevelt in Navy Oil Scandal

Washington, March 31.—A resolution demanding that President Coolidge immediately request the resignation of Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt because of this connection with the leasing of naval oil reserves was introduced in the Senate today by Senator Dill (D., Washington).

"I think Colonel Roosevelt is more involved in these lease of naval oil reserves than ex-Secretary of the Navy Denby ever was," Dill declared.

"Roosevelt carried the order to the late President Harding transferring the naval reserves from the Navy to the Interior Department and was acting Secretary of the Navy when countless were asked to them off all claimants on Teapot Dome. The procedure should have gone into the courts and not be this outrageous use of the military force of the country. His relationship with the oil leases of Harry F. Sinclair, known as Teapot Dome, is a disgrace."

The Beautiful, but Bluntly Honest Story of a Boston Girl By ELENORE MEHERIN

He winked. "Why don't you take me to the altar?"

John and Bessie had been together for some time. John was a handsome young man, and Bessie was a lovely girl. They had been in love for some time, and now they were about to be married.

Chickie was a beautiful girl, but she was also very bluntly honest. She was a Boston girl, and she knew what she wanted. She was not like other girls who were shy and reserved. She was confident and assertive.

Unless you make it this way—

EVERY housekeeper should know that there is only one right way to make tea. If this is your recipe you need read no further, for you know how delicious real tea is.

But if you do not make it this way you are not really drinking tea. Your cups may be very slightly different. Perhaps you do not use the teaspoon perhaps you do not brew it long enough. You may not be careful that the water is hot when you pour it on the leaves.

Each one of these small matters is important. They form the difference between a weak, unsatisfactory concoction and real tea, the world's most refreshing and delightful drink.

Try this recipe now—while you have a chance. Never again will you make tea in any other way.

Let Tetley Help

All tea is not alike. Crops from many different gardens must be blended to produce the tea you buy. Your enjoyment of tea depends upon what brand you buy—upon the picker's ability to secure the finest crops, upon the skill and accuracy with which these teas are blended. Because Tetley's ability to do these things is unequalled, Tetley's Orange Pekoe Tea is the choice of discriminating tea drinkers the world over.

The right way to make tea.

Boil water and put in one teaspoonful of tea in pot for each cup of tea.

Four fresh blades of boiling water on the tealeaves.

Steep for five or six minutes.

Always serve with milk or cream.

One pound of Tetley's Tea makes 360 cups.

TETLEY'S

Makes good TEA a certainty

Senate Daugherty Probers Should Go on and Get Facts

The Senate Committee which has been investigating Attorney-General Daugherty's department is said to be in doubt whether it will continue its investigations now that Mr. Daugherty has resigned.

If the only reason for the investigating committee was the political reason for getting Mr. Daugherty out of office, then there is no reason for the Senate Committee continuing its investigation.

But if the purpose of the committee was to get the facts in regard to the Attorney-General and his department and to find out whether or not the accusations of corruption were true, then the Senate Committee cannot fail to continue its investigation without discrediting itself much more than it has discredited Mr. Daugherty.

Up to the time of Mr. Daugherty's retirement nothing had come before the committee except the evidence adduced against the Attorney-General and his department, and possibly not all of that.

Mr. Means, under indictment and awaiting trial for certain criminal acts in New York, gave evidence against Mr. Daugherty.

Mr. Jennings, one-time train robber and now professional reformer, gave evidence against Mr. Daugherty.

Mrs. Smith, with a grievance, real or imaginary, gave evidence, largely hearsay, against the Ex-Attorney-General.

And several ex-agents of the Department of Justice, who had been discovered in personally improper acts and disciplined by the Department of Justice, gave evidence against the department.

All of this may be perfectly truthful evidence, and on the other hand wholly prejudiced evidence.

The point is that all the evidence on both sides is not yet before the committee or before the public; and the committee is not able to determine to what extent, if to any extent, the Department of Justice and the Ex-Attorney-General are guilty of acts that are discreditable, subject to condemnation and possibly to prosecution.

If there has been corruption there ought to be prosecution, and the penalty for corruption.

If there has not been corruption, there ought to be vindication; and the Senate Committee has no right to stop until it has all the evidence on both sides.

The opposition to Mr. Daugherty as Attorney-General has not suddenly biased up. It began at the time he took office. It was due largely to the fact that he was not a corporate lawyer, like most of the men who have occupied the office of Attorney-General in late years.

It was not due to any assertion that he was not a good lawyer. He was immensely superior intellectually to Attorney-General Gregory, who had preceded him. But Gregory was a corporate lawyer, an old trust lawyer, the attorney for other trusts and corporations, and no objection was made to him.

The summary of Attorney-General Daugherty's career in the New York Herald-Tribune of Saturday, March 29, states that Mr. Daugherty received his baccalaureate degree from the University of Michigan Law School in 1911, that he practiced twelve years with much success, at first alone, and after 1902 as the head of a law firm of Daugherty, Food and Bary; that "he was within the ranks of the party, the foremost opponent of Joseph B. Foraker."

Quite a creditable career, especially when we remember that Joseph B. Foraker was the Senator who was driven out of public life by the "Standard Oil Letters," which the Hearst papers made public and which revealed Senator Foraker as the recipient of secret certificates of deposit, amounting to many thousands of dollars, from the Standard Oil Company.

The Herald-Tribune summary also contains this significant paragraph:

"From the time of his entry into the Cabinet Mr. Daugherty was the target for all manner of personal and political attacks; and he was also confronted with an unusual number of important legislative problems of a character that made it certain that his action upon them, no matter what it might be, would subject him to hostile criticism." "Although charged by his enemies with laxity in action against trusts, he in fact prosecuted with much energy and effect, and had the distinction of being the first Attorney-General to obtain jail sentences against violators of the anti-trust laws."

These paragraphs seem to express very accurately the fundamental objection to Mr. Daugherty as Attorney-General. He was not a corporation lawyer.

He actually had the hardihood to oppose the Standard Oil Company's subsidized Senator, and the rashness actually to secure jail sentences in certain prosecutions against trust magnates.

He seemed to take his position and his work seriously, at least as far as the trusts were concerned; and he apparently did not realize that a Republican public official may say anything about the trusts that he pleases, but he must not DO anything to incommode them or interfere with them.

He may make all the meaningless motions in the air that he likes, but the moment he secures the custody of those great financial backers of the Republican party, the moment he goes to the extreme of enforcing the law against them and actually securing jail sentences against them, his condition is hopeless and he might as well resign his job and from his party.

Perhaps it was through high crimes and misdemeanors in the Attorney-General's office that Mr. Daugherty gave his enemies an opportunity to get his scalp, and perhaps it was not.

At any rate, they got his scalp and he is out of office. The accusation that Attorney-General Daugherty was under trust influence because he bought and sold a few shares of oil stock in the market and made thereby $543.75, seems ridiculous in comparison with his convincing record of having secured jail penalties against trust magnates.

Think of it—$543.75 considered as a bribe to the Attorney-General of the United States!

Why, your trust magnate would give that as a bribe to the doorman in the Attorney-General's office.

Perhaps the Attorney-General and the Department of Justice were corrupted—but not by $543.75.

The Senate committee should continue to take evidence until it gets something that the public can believe.

And President Coolidge should take care whom he appoints as successor to Attorney-General Daugherty.

It should not be the customary corporation lawyer who will NOT secure jail sentences against violators of the anti-trust laws.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

I've been much interested in a controversy between two of my friends, Mrs. A. and Miss B. Like many in these post-war days, Miss B. is anxious to make the world a better, brighter place. She feels that she knows the exact philosophy which will make the world a brighter, better place. If her friends would only adopt that philosophy the millennium would be at least three jumps nearer. But, oddly enough, every effort to make them adopt that philosophy invariably ends in a row. That affair with Mrs. A. for instance. A. and Miss B. have been warm friends. Mrs. A. is in great trouble. She has recently lost her husband. Miss B. wished to comfort her. She was sure that if Mrs. A. would accept her philosophy her grief would be lightened. But Mrs. A. balked.

"There's no use trying to make me think that way, Emma," said Mrs. A. "You look at things one way. I look at them another."

"But there are certain fundamentals on which we all agree, Clara, dear," protested Miss B.

"For instance, what?" said Mrs. A.

"Well—that God is love. That He sends us our pain or pleasure as punishment or reward. And that we are beset with devils as well as angels. Surely we can agree on that much."

"No, we can't," hastily protested Mrs. A. "I believe in God as much as you do, but I don't believe He is handing out punishments. And I don't believe in devils, either. To me that's a hangover of witch worship."

"So, there you are, Miss B. will never feel the same toward Mrs. A. again. The belief in an avenging God and devils is fundamental to Miss B. And she can't for the life of her see how any faith can be sincere without that belief."

This is a sample of the sort of thing we are all experiencing. And it is doing much to make this world a very unhappy, peevish place. We are all much excited over our neighbors. We want to arrange their lives. We want to dictate what sort of food they shall eat, clothes they shall wear, amusements they shall have, laws they shall vote and gods they shall worship.

Now, a certain amount of concern over your neighbor is a wholesome and necessary thing. He needs you as you need him. You can go very far into his life with helpful service. BUT THERE'S A DEFINITE LIMIT TO HOW FAR YOU CAN OR SHOULD GO. No matter how well you understand your neighbor you can never understand him absolutely. And he can never understand you absolutely.

His needs are not your needs. His dreams cannot be your dreams. The food for his soul won't agree with your soul. His STANDARD OF RIGHT AND WRONG WILL ALWAYS BE A LITTLE DIFFERENT FROM YOUR STANDARD OF RIGHT AND WRONG. The things that are fundamental to you will never be fundamental to him.

The world has never needed to grip that fact as greatly as it needs to grip it today. All our efficiency and brilliancy and brotherly concern are in vain unless we learn TOLERANCE. If we are really interested in the other chap we are willing to live and let live. We will agree that his disbelief in devils, or prohibition on the Democratic party, or jazz or whatever it may be is quite as sincere as our belief in such things. And we'll work with him even if we don't agree with him. If we won't do that, our interest in his affairs isn't based on friendliness at all. It's simply a manifestation of our own bossiness and conceit.

DR. FRANK CRANE ON THE HIGH COST OF GOLF

By Dr. Frank Crane

MOST of us complain of the high cost of everything, yet once in a while some item gives us a jolt. It makes us realize that the demands of modern civilized life are becoming rapidly more exorbitant.

Lodging decently and comfortably in a hotel that used to cost a traveling man $2 a day now costs him from $10 to $20.

Home expenses have kept pace with the expenses of travel.

And when it comes to luxuries the only expression that can fit the case is the classic American exclamation, "Geo whizz!"

For example, according to the items collected by Damon Runyon the other day, you could in 1903 have joined the Claremont Country Club of Oakland, Cal., for $100. Now if you can get in the privilege will cost you $2,500.

"You could," he says, "have joined the San Francisco Golf and Country Club in 1897 for $1,500, a by no means insignificant sum in those days. Today the privilege is held at $4,500.

Three years ago when the Wilshire Country Club, of Los Angeles, was new a membership cost $250. Now it costs $1,250. "The Virginia Country Club, of Long Beach, Cal., started out about the same period, with its membership at $100. Now it costs $1,000 to get in this club."

All of which goes to show that so far from being misers, Americans may find it difficult to prove that they are not spendthrifts.

As the custom in European circles to speak of Americans as "dollar mad," over there they are supposed to be so superior that they care nothing for so sordid a thing as money, but devote their whole mind to art and literature, gambling, romance, socialism, leisure, play, easefulness and pessimism.

Over here we are supposed to be all living on Main Street, all going home to lunch on corned beef and cabbage, all working 25 hours a day like Roum's universal robots, and altogether talking constantly through our nose about how much money we have.

As a matter of fact, Americans care less for money than any race in the world. They get it quickly and spend it more quickly.

Exclusive and high-toned amusements may be at Biarritz or Monte Carlo, they have nothing on us; and if you don't believe it, you can apply for admission to the golf clubs at Oakland, Cal., and points West.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON VENUS DRAWS NEAR

By Garrett P. Serviss

Famous Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

VENUS is now growing very splendid once more as evening star. She draws every eye her way if the western sky is clear and unobscured yet, brilliant as she looks, few would guess that her brightness is between seven and eight times greater than that of the brightest fixed star, Sirius.

She will get still brighter. By May 15 she will be about twenty times brighter than Sirius. Yet strange as it may seem, the relative area of her surface, from which we receive light, will be continually diminishing.

On March 21 she reflected the sunlight to us from 8.638 of the outer area of that half of her globe which is turned toward us; that is the reflection of light came from only 0.355 of that area. Nevertheless, continually, she was brighter!

The explanation is to be found in the fact that Venus is all the time drawing nearer to the earth, so that her disk, though not changing in actual size, covers a great space to our eyes.

On March 21 she was about 38,000,000 miles from us; on May 15, she will be only 48,000,000 miles away, the apparent area varies with the inverse square of the distance, so that when Venus is half as far away she looks four times as large, and if in the meantime the illuminated part of her disk has increased one-half, the apparent area of that same part has increased four times, so that it gives us twice as many interesting details as before, multiplied by four being equal to two.

If you have a telescope with an object-glass three or four inches in diameter, which is large enough for the ordinary purpose of an amateur observer, you will see many interesting details about Venus, but you would not be able to see the inhabitants if you had a telescope a hundred times more powerful than the great 100-inch one at Mount Wilson. And the science of optics will have to be revolutionized before that can happen. Perhaps it will be revolutionized; I hope it will.

Science must be called upon to help the eye as it helped the ear when it invented radio! How will science do it? I answer question with question: Did anybody tell in advance how science was going to perform the other miracle?

When the inventive mind strikes a new trail it has no time to answer questions. It simply presses on, filled with devouring curiosity concerning the end that it is going to reach. Only when the goal has been reached can the road that led to it be described.

Just as we now talk about taking unlimited mechanical power out of atoms, without knowledge of all how it can be done, so we can find intellectual and scientific considerations as this concerning optics: The image of Venus formed on the retina of the eye, theoretically, contains a perfect picture of every detail of Venus' surface. But owing to the convergence of the rays of light the image of the picture, as compared with that of the planet, is reduced in proportion to the distance, so that the details in the picture become infinitely minute.

But, if it were found, by rendering the light rays parallel, or by indefinitely reducing the size of the light-waves with a corresponding change in the sensitivity of the retina, the Venus might readily be seen, though only so much of the surface of the planet would be visible as the same time as corresponds in actual extent to the pupil of the observer's eye.

The telescope, so far as it is able, produces a similar result by magnifying the details of the image formed at its focus. But, from various causes, the image is very imperfect, while the magnifying power is mechanically limited, so that even the best and most powerful telescope is unable to show any details that are less, say, than 100 miles in diameter.

So when we talk about seeing people on other worlds we also must consider how a telescope in optics is to be brought about.

ONCE-OVERS

GO TO THE BAT FOR YOUR NEIGHBOR OUT OF A JOB. You may know of some man in your neighborhood or some one with whom you formerly worked, who is out of a job.

Give him a hand once to do his job. You may make him do more toward getting him a place than he is able to do for himself.

Do not be afraid of recommending a man because you fear he may not make good. If you are firmly established in your position not to give any thought to the man who may not have a job. He may not be so afraid of recommending a man because you fear he may not make good.

If it is the reason why you do not assist others why not adopt the plan of helping the man for whom you have procured work, telling him that you recommended him as being a man capable of looking after the duties of that job.

He will give you his thanks not only to make good for him but also to show you that the confidence you had put in him was not misplaced.

Why not try to do a good turn for the other fellow when it is within your power to do so?
